

Jennifer Russell Biography

Jennifer Russell holds a BFA degree in Dance Performance from the University of South Florida. She has performed principle roles on Broadway, off Broadway, in regional theater productions, and in nationally aired television shows. Jennifer has appeared in television commercials, in corporate industrials and as a runway and print model for several dancewear companies. She has also been recognized for her work as a dance choreographer and earned one hundred twenty scholarships or titles as a competitive dancer.

Jennifer has trained at the Houston Ballet, American Ballet Theatre as well as studio programs. She is also professionally trained in theatre, voice and instrumental music. While in college, Jennifer toured the country for three summers as a musician and taught movement and choreography as part of the visual instructional staffs of a World Class Division Drum and Bugle Corps, a University indoor ensemble and a High School marching band program.

Jennifer is currently touring with Dance Olympus, teaching her original choreography to students and teachers at their workshops held across the country. She is also teaching group fitness classes for the University of South Florida, is under contract for special events with Busch Entertainment, judges competitive events, teaches and choreographs for dance studios, heads the visual staff of a high school marching band program and works one-on-one with dancers and musicians. Jennifer brings her love of dance, music and fitness to all her work in the arts.
